Inauguration of council, mayor is celebrated

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Residents filled every seat in city council chambers Monday morning to watch each of the newly-elected Romulus officials sworn into office.

The formal ceremony marked the 10th annual inauguration within the city.

Swearing in the new officials was Judge William Szilinis, who took his own oath of office in council chambers four months ago.

Pledging their services to the city were Mayor Beverly McAnally, City Clerk Linda Choate, Treasurer James Napiorkowski, Mayor Pro Tem Randolph Gear and Councilmen Fred Junior Block, Russell Lambert, Ellis Pennington, Jimmie Raspberry and William Wadsworth. Councilman Noah Bergeron was unable to attend the ceremony.

In her inaugural address, McAnally pointed out that projects she discussed during her inauguration two years ago now are coming into being. She cited Wick road improvements near Detroit Metropolitan Airport and proposed development in the south of the city.

In addition, a proposed Vining Road interchange to I-94 has received approval on the state level and now is in the hands of federal officials, the mayor said. That interchange is one of the last hurdles awaiting the Metro World Centre, a multi-use development area that would be constructed near the airport.

Computer will aid district finances

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Hoping to create a brighter financial future for the district, members of the Romulus school board Monday night approved the purchase of a computerized financial management program.

Known as computer modeling, the program will cost $15,000. Funds are expected to come from the district's maintenance millage.

Before voting, board members heard a presentation about the program from Robert Caldwell of Stauder, Barch & Associates, Inc., an Ann Arbor financial planning firm. Caldwell said his company has provided the modeling program to school districts and city governments throughout the state.

A computer modeling system, he said, works with a large data base of information. The system would contain five years worth of detailed financial history about the district. With that information, operators could "what if" with their finances, Caldwell said.

The "what if" would allow the district to project financial scenarios. For instance, if school officials wanted to know the long-term effect of a teacher layoff, the modeling program could provide that information, Caldwell said.

The program would keep specific information about the district, such as teacher salaries, pupil enrollment and spending per student. Officials can update the information as changes occur.

"You have a complete snapshot of the individual years," Caldwell said.

Possible uses for the program are planning financial strategies, trouble-shooting or organizing financial information to present to the public, he said.

Board members expressed support for the program but requested the information be reviewed and updated monthly, rather than yearly.

The program will be ready for use within four to eight weeks, Caldwell said, after several informational sessions with district officials.

Heat may buy time for old school

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Until debate over the future of the first Romulus high school building cools down, district officials are considering supplying the building with heat.

A group of residents determined to save the building from proposed demolition have insisted the building must remain heated to prevent serious damage from occurring.

Because the school boiler contains asbestos, a suspected cancer-causing agent, school officials have refused to comply with the residents' request.

The building, located on Olive Street, was built in 1930. It served as the first high school for the district. Over the years, it has housed junior high school students, special education students and a program for emotionally-disturbed students.

Last year, because of the asbestos in the building and concerns over liability, Romulus school officials closed the building.

After two public meetings to decide the fate of the building, school officials decided last September to demolish the building. Demolition is tentatively slated for this summer.

However, a group of Romulus residents are convinced the building is part of the city's history and should be preserved.

While discussing the school controversy Monday night, board members considered a possible method to heat the building. Superintendent William Bedell suggested hanging space heaters over the school gym.

Bedell said he does not want the district to be accused of ruining any hope of saving the building.

Although board members have supported the idea of demolition in the past, some of them said they would not object if another party funded building repairs and renovations.

"If somehow . . . someone wants to try to preserve it until we come to a conclusion, it may be something we want to do," said Daniel Bales, board secretary.

Board members agreed to wait until the meeting next week with city council before pursuing the idea of space heaters. The board and council are meeting at 7 p.m. Nov. 21 at city hall.

Young artists will be honored at reception

First-grader Jenna Finch can boast that her newest work of art is framed and waiting to be displayed at a local Romulus bank.

Finch is among eight Romulus students participating in the Art in the Workplace program this year.

The program gives young artists a chance to display their masterpieces in businesses and offices throughout the city.

Ranging from first to 11th grade, the young people will be honored tonight during a special reception, Fall Into Art. Both the program and the reception are sponsored by the Romulus Arts Council.

Students will be addressed by Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally and State Representative James Kosteva (D-Canton).

This will be the second student reception staged by the council. Students who participated in the program last year are also welcome to attend. Their creations will be returned, professionally framed and matted.

Selections for this year were made by a panel of local residents last spring during the Michigan Art Festival, said Gloria Chandler, treasurer of the council.

Chandler said several teachers helped with the project, including Mark Anderson, Gayle Fraley, Nancy McLellan and William Babcock.

Many local businesses and residents also have helped with the program, she said. More than $1,400 has been contributed. "They have been so generous, and it has been a real shot in the arm," she said.

Chandler also listed the student participants for this year and the businesses that will display their work.

- Patrice Amos, 10th grade, Crane Funeral Home.
- Beth Bergman, 11th grade, Mayor McAnally's office.

- Jenna Finch, first grade, Security Bank & Trust.

- Philip Henson, 10th grade, Dr. Kundan Sata, DDS.

- Dawn Howell, sixth grade, Dr. Rhonda Hennesy, DDS.

- Emmenue Lindsey, second grade, Header Production, Inc.

- Thomas Welch, seventh grade, city clerk's office.

- Calvin Whitehead, ninth grade, Manufacturer's National Bank.

House beaned with bricks

Six people were arrested early Sunday morning for allegedly throwing bricks at a Romulus house.

This is the second such attack on the house in eight days.

The first incident, also involving bricks, was reported Nov. 4. A young man in the building was injured when a brick struck him in the face.

A resident in the house Sunday morning received minor injuries when the bricks knocked a door down on top of him.

Police officials believe both incidents are related to a fight that occurred during a party Nov. 1 at the same address.

Most of the suspects in this case are from Roseville, Michigan.

Council meets with school board

City councilmembers will meet with the Romulus Board of Education at 7 p.m. Nov. 21 to discuss the future of the vacant school on Olive Street.

The joint meeting was proposed by council last month after appeals from residents to save the building, which once served as the first high school for Romulus. District officials earlier this year announced plans to demolish the building.

Participants will meet in council chambers.

Council sets new meeting times

Continuing with an existing system, Romulus city councilmembers Tuesday night approved a meeting schedule and rules of order.

Councilmembers, however, elected to change the regular meeting times from 8 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on the first, second and fourth Monday of each month.

In addition, they adopted the Roberts Rules of Order as a form of parliamentary procedure.

Deputy clerk is appointed

Pamela Morrisson Kersey will serve another term as Romulus Deputy Clerk.

Councilmembers Tuesday night approved a request for re-appointment made by City Clerk Linda Choate.

Tree lighting ceremony set

Festivities for the traditional Romulus tree lighting ceremony are scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Dec. 1 in the downtown area.

Members of the city recreation department announced plans for the ceremony after their meeting Nov. 8.

Santa Claus is expected to join the festivities at 6:45 p.m. Refreshments will be served at the Progressive Hall off Ozga Road.

Scouts host holiday meal

Local members of the Huron District Boy Scouts of America will host a Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 23 for the needy.

The free meal is for those who do not have food for the holidays or someone to share it with, organizers said.

This event will be staged at the Alfred Sheridan Community Center, 12111 Pardee Road in Taylor. For reservations, call 292-3461, 287-2800 or 897-1965.

Correction

A listing of city election results printed Nov. 9 should have stated Councilman William Wadsworth received 2,172 votes.

Councilman follows family tradition

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

When Russell Lambert says politics are in his blood, the new Romulus city councilmember is not just repeating another cliché.

Lambert grew up as the son of an active city politician. His brother, Allan, recently wrapped up his own career on city council to work for the Romulus police department.

"I've always had a taste of politics," Lambert said last week, several days after being placed on council by Romulus voters.

His interest in politics ties in with a devotion to the community, Lambert said of his home for the most of his life.

Lambert's parents moved to Romulus from Detroit when he was 3, and his father almost immediately became involved in local politics.

"That's where I got my first taste of this," he said.

As a young man, he headed to Eastern Michigan University to study accounting. His major was the choice of his father, Lambert said, not his own. Ultimately, Lambert left college and found himself en route to Vietnam.

When Lambert returned from his tour of duty, he moved to Oakland, California and resumed his education. His studies were halted again, however, when Lambert decided to open his own business. He has remained self-employed.

While he lived in California, Lambert stressed, he remained a Romulus voter through absentee ballot. He followed city issues through newspaper reports and contact with local residents.

"I've never voted any place but this city," he said.

Lambert returned to Romulus more than eight years ago and once again became immersed in community and political events. He has coached little league softball, taught hunter safety classes sponsored by the police department and served as a volunteer fire fighter.

Lambert also married a woman from his high school days, Maria. The couple have three sons.

When his brother gave up local politics, Lambert began to consider a campaign of his own.

"I've been a foot soldier as long as I can remember," he said.

Also an impetus toward his decision was Mayor Beverly McAnally. Lambert said she encouraged him to seek a political career several times.

Giving up the volunteer fire department to become a candidate was a painful decision, Lambert said.

"I got satisfaction from that (position). I knew I was helping some people in the community. That's my intention now."

Looking forward to his first city council meeting, Lambert hopes to work effectively with the other elected officials.

"Hopefully, I can make some logical decisions for the city. It will be a learning experience. I know I can't do it alone."

Lambert identified two city issues concerning him.

First, he is concerned proposed expansion plans for Detroit Metropolitan Airport may have a negative effect on the city.

"I'm all for expansion and development but not at the cost of the citizens. We have to watch it closely," he said.

His second concern ties in with more beneficial development, commercial and residential. He believes the limited residential base in the city discourages commercial developers.

Nevertheless, Lambert said city growth is on an upward swing.

"We are a growing city. We are changing."

After years of assisting his father and brother with their political campaigns, Russell Lambert (above) will now have his own shot at the limelight. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer

Program will give students sneak preview of college

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Hoping a little exposure to college will encourage high school students to continue their education after graduation, Romulus board members decided Monday night to send a group of local students to Wayne County Community College.

The Partners for Progress program allows high school juniors and seniors from throughout the county to attend classes at WCCC for high school and college credits.

The program focuses on "middle of the road" students—those with average grades who may not have considered themselves college material, explained Romulus Superintendent William Bedell.

"If they're exposed to a college, they'll have motivation to go," Bedell said.

In these special classes, students will sharpen their academic and communication skills.

If the students decide to attend WCCC after they graduate from high school, the credits from this program, up to 24 credit hours, apply toward their degrees.

Approximately 50 to 75 Romulus students are expected to participate.

Students will be charged college tuition for the classes. Bedell said he will come before the board again in the next few weeks with a proposed financial plan.

One option, he said, would be to offset tuition costs with state grants and donations from local businesses. Students would pay a portion of the tuition, he said.

Injured man finds strength in friends, family

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Three months ago, Todd Hammons had his friends to thank for saving his life when a diving accident left him paralyzed from the waist down.

Now, Hammons remains grateful to friends and family as they offer him love and strength for his recovery.

The 19-year-old Romulus resident nearly drowned last August after diving into a 20-foot swimming hole in Van Buren Township. When Hammons hit the water, his neck snapped, rendering him paralyzed.

Worried when their friend did not surface, Brian Farnum and Phillip Messer rescued Hammons from the water and performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation on him. A third friend, Christine Fortune, stayed with Hammons when the two men went for help.

Since that day, Hammons has been a patient at the University of Michigan Medical Center. In recent weeks, he has been allowed to come home on weekends.

Discussing his recovery, relaxed on a couch at home last week, Hammons did not present the appearance of an injured man. Still, he can expect at least two more years of physical and occupational therapy to become as close as possible to independence.

Already, Hammons believes he is gaining ground.

"I find myself getting better," he said.

As an example, Hammons explained he has found it difficult to keep warm since his injury. Even under heavy blankets he has experienced cases of "the shivers" for up to two hours.

Slowly though, he said, his ability to fight this problem is increasing.

Hammons said he is surprised about all of the gadgets available to help disabled people care for themselves such as items for writing, bathing and lifting.

"There are a lot of tools."

Although he has only full use of his shoulders, a few muscles in his arms and limited use of his hands, Hammons is rebuilding his writing skills.

For instance, he is learning to use a method that allows people to use the way fingers grasp and open as the hand flexes.

More of a challenge, Hammons said, is mastering his manual wheelchair. Wheeling from his hospital room to the physical therapy room is quite a workout.

"I impressed myself today," he said, smiling. "That wheelchair is the hardest therapy I ever did."

In addition to therapy, Hammons is taking a computer class at the hospital, but the course will end when he is discharged next month. Although he has not made many decisions about his future, Hammons is thinking of more schooling.

Someday, he said, he would like to be the person on the other side of the desks, warning high school students not to take risks with their bodies.

"I want to explain how easy accidents are... how fortunate they (students) are."

Ironically, Hammons injured his spine years ago as a high school student. He wore a neck brace but did not lose any of his functions.

After the diving accident, Hammons began to believe he would regain most of his upper body use.

"I thought I would get more back."

And even though he finds himself becoming depressed sometimes as reality of his situation sinks in, Hammons said he works to appear "up" for his family and friends.

"They go through it just as bad as I do," he said.

He is grateful for the moral support he has received in the forms of cards, balloons and visits. Two staff members from the high school, Norman Butler and Cheryl Stallings,

Recovering from a spinal injury, Todd Hammons (above) says he is able to remain optimistic due to the endless supply of support offered by his friends and family. Hammons is expected to be released from the University of Michigan Medical Center next month. Already, he is able to return home for the weekends. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer have been to the hospital regularly for visits.

"There's a lot of people that have helped me," Hammons said.

Making the most of his weekends at home, Hammons has used the time to spend with his friends. This Saturday night he plans to attend a special benefit dance staged by the Romulus Kwik Helpers. The dance will begin at 7 p.m. at Romulus Progressive Hall on Ozga Road.

Youth pleads guilty

The Romulus youth, who was charged in the shooting death of his 16-year-old Sumpter Township friend, has entered a plea of guilty to a second-degree murder charge.

Mandigo Galindez, 15, is awaiting sentencing by Recorder's Court Judge Dalton A. Roberson.

According to police reports,

Galindez and his friend, Jeff Middleton, had walked from South Middle School to Middleton's home, on Harris Road, on Sept. 21. The youths had a disagreement, and, subsequently, Middleton brought out a shotgun. Galindez took the shotgun away from the victim and shot him with a single blast. Middleton died shortly after the incident.

Other projects gaining speed include a senior citizen apartment complex for Wayne Road and an exhibition center, McAnally said.

"I just hope I live long enough to see if it all happens," she joked. "These are exciting and unprecedented times."

As the new mayor pro tem, Gear told the audience he hopes to follow the example set by his predecessor, Mary Ann Banks.

"I just hope I have half of the knowledge she displayed," he said.

The ceremony also featured a performance by the Romulus Senior High School Choir members and brief prayers were offered by several pastors from the community.

Bank, school are partners

Students at Wick Elementary School, in Romulus, have joined with representatives of the Ecorse-Merriman branch of the National Bank of Detroit in a "Partnerships in Education" project.

Representatives of the bank will work closely with students to provide them with a sense of the business world and the community.

Before the school year ended last year, students released balloons as part of the program. To the balloons were attached letters which asked for a response from the finder. Responses were received from throughout the state, and beyond.

Now the students are tackling a more serious project. Bank manager Gary Face is working with a teachers committee at Wick to develop joint programs for the youngsters. The children will learn about the functions of a bank through age-appropriate activities.

Children at Wick are invited to open a savings account at the bank, with a parent. Student groups will visit the bank. In return, the students will help decorate the bank lobby with pictures they make in art class.

Students head to France

A group of French students at Romulus Senior High School are planning to take a trip to France this April.

Students will be in France for 15 days, spending one week with a local family and one week as a group.

"Our trip goal will be to provide students with a cultural and educational experience possible only in a native setting," said Rosa Williams, French instructor.

The trip will cost $1,300 along with the price of passports, meals for one week and spending money.

The Romulus Recreation Department hosted the regional punt, pass and kick competition last month.

The first-place winner was 13 year-old Inkster resident Kemoni Bozeman.

Rica Barge, also of Inkster, earned second place.

Bozeman was to compete in the state competition Nov. 12 in Pontiac.

Schools close for holiday

Schools in the Romulus district will be closed Nov. 23 and 24 for the Thanksgiving holiday. Classes will resume Nov. 27.

Tickets remain for Dracula

Tickets still are available for the last two productions of Dracula, scheduled for 8 p.m., tomorrow and Saturday at Romulus Senior High School.

Student begins career in television early

At age 14, Richard Landskroener has already taken steps to make his career goals a reality.

The Romulus high school student volunteers his time to help with the city cable stations. Most days after school he heads to the cable office in city hall and starts typing messages to appear on television. Landskroener hopes this position is the first step to a career in cable television.

"I've always liked doing this," he said.

For members of the city cable commission, Landskroener is a blessing. Oliver Warren, who previously was responsible for programming all cable presentations, was especially happy to see him. He is impressed with Landskroener's knack for the job.

"I think he'll expand to video work," he said.

Landskroener began his interest in cable work nearly two years ago while talking with an employee of Omnicom Cablevision. After watching her in action, he began to picture himself behind the controls. With her help, Landskroener taught himself how to operate a character generator (a type of keyboard used to place messages on the television screen).

"If I look it over closely (the equipment), I can figure out how to use it," he said.

Working in the city cable office since August, Landskroener now sees his work as second nature. He can quickly demonstrate the practice of typing messages on screen. The character generator allows him to select colors, letter style and size and the way words come on screen - bang, print, roll or crawl style.

Working with the video club at the high school, Landskroener is sharpening his skills. The newest club project is a type of video yearbook, documenting student activities throughout the school year. The finished product will be shown in June.

Landskroener recently received a plaque from the Romulus Cable Commission in appreciation of his efforts.

Home prices increase

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

If you're interested in purchasing a house, you're going to be interested in interest rates.

And money lenders are saying those rates are coming down.

However, although the rates are going down, the prices for your dream home are going up.

According to statistics recently released by the Western Wayne Oakland County Board of Realtors, a multiple listing service, homes in Westland and Canton, the hottest markets in the area, have gone for $2,500 more than they did earlier this year.

It is definitely a seller's market today, according to Eric J. Hunt, MLS president, who stressed that "with the recent dip in mortgage rates, well-maintained homes in preferred locations usually disappear off the lists in a hurry."

Mortgage rates for 30-year conventional loans range from 9.75 to 10 percent, according to lenders. Fifteen-year loans are a little less.

In October, Westland homeowners placed 117 homes on the market for sale and 76 were sold. The median price was $64,500, up from earlier this year. To date, there have been 1,372 Westland homes listed with 878 sold at a median price of $62,000.

One of the most attractive - and expensive - markets in the area remains Canton Township. Of the 123 homes listed with Realtors in October, 75 were grabbed up at a median price of $109,000. That's $5,000 more than earlier sales this year.

To date, 1,221 'for sale' signs went up on the lawns of Canton homeowners and 748 were sold for a price of $104,000.

Realtors believe that as mortgage rates continue to decline, it may bring more and more first-time buyers into the market.

"A house remains the most expensive investment most people will make," Hunt said.

Phone call is memorable one

When the phone rang, I knew. I don't think I ever doubted that he would call - the question was only when.

Don't ask how, because it's a mystery to me. I just knew it was him before I answered. When I did, the man on the other end of the line said very simply, "Hello, this is Alex Haley."

And I answered him, as if having a world-famous author and speaker phone me was an everyday occurrence in my life. It was only later that I began to realize what had really happened.

I first heard Alex Haley speak two years ago at a National Newspaper Association meeting in Nashville, Tennessee. I have now had the privilege of serving as the Michigan state chairman of that association for several years.

Alex Haley didn't disappoint anybody. His talk was of special interest to me as I have been a dedicated genealogist for many years now. In case anybody out there has been under a rock for the past decade or so, Haley is the author of the blockbuster novel Roots from which the television mini-series of the same name was made.

Roots has become a model of success for many a frustrated family historian, journalist and novelist. All of those things I am...especially the frustrated part. But my interest in genealogy and writing made anything Alex Haley had to say of burning interest to me. After his speech in Nashville, I wrote a column about my first encounter with Mr. Haley. Some readers with better memories than mine may recall that column.

We were such a good audience, NNA executives invited Haley to speak to us again in Oregon two years ago, in Texas last year, and for a fourth time in Atlanta last month. If you have ever heard him speak, there will be no mystery to all these repeat performances. He is truly a master, and totally captivated his audience of hard-boiled, jaded newspaper professionals. That isn't easy.

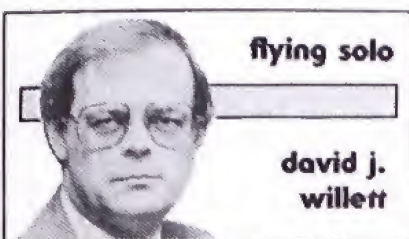

Haley chronicled the history of his ancestors in his talk, as he has in his writings, but he did far more than that. He told us the history of America, some of it good, some of it quite the opposite. As he told his tale, he spoke to our hearts. He told us of the pain, suffering and indignities of black America.

He also wove a thread through his narrative of the people who were kind, loving, caring and unforgettable. In his remarks, he told his audiences that he sees community newspapers in America as the capillary system of our country. He sees himself as a storyteller, and one who records events that are too small or insignificant to seem worthy of attention to the large media.

Were it not for the community newspapers of America, no one would ever know of some of the people, and events that take place across the face of our country, Haley told us.

To say I was impressed the first time I heard Alex Haley speak is a little like calling the Pacific Ocean a large puddle. He inspired my consideration of a book of my own concerning the great characters and events that lurk in my family tree.

The night before his Atlanta talk, this concept took over my thinking, and I found myself unable to sleep, considering the material my research provided. I got up, and in a nearly dark room took pen in hand to write Haley a brief note about flying solo

my idea.

After several pages of my yellow legal pad, and several hours of the morning, had been consumed, I realized that my enthusiasm had nearly made me late for Haley's speech. I bounded through the shower and raced downstairs to hear the great man talk, fat envelope clutched in hand.

Seated next to me in the audience was JoAnn Buckley of the NNA staff. She is the dear soul who makes events like the NNA convention happen. I whispered to her that I had a letter for Alex Haley, and would she see that it was delivered. JoAnn quickly agreed. I had purchased a copy of both Roots and A Different Kind of Christmas, Haley's newest book, with the promise that Haley would autograph them.

After Haley's speech, I grabbed my newly acquired books, and made my way to the front stage. I asked him to autograph my books, and he quickly agreed. In the patter as he was signing, I introduced myself, and told him that I had written a letter to him that was given to his assistant.

Alex stuck out his hand, looked me straight in the eye, and said, "Hello Dave Willett." I simply explained that the letter he would be receiving had to do with a project I would like him to look at, and that I hoped I would hear from him.

When my telephone rang last week, it wasn't just another call. Not to me. Alex Haley talked to me about my idea for a book, about his thoughts and his schedule. He is working on a book about cousins. His premise is that people in America have relatives across the oceans about whom they know nothing. Perhaps a book could awaken folks to their kinship in other lands, and in the reading make the world a better place.

As many are aware, Haley has found he can escape from the day-to-day interruptions, and find the quiet, solitude and detachment needed to write only at sea. Next month he will board a ship, and write to America from the heart, in a style that is so uniquely his own.

He encouraged me to send him more information on my project, and he encouraged me to write the book myself. He said sometimes what one wants to say is so personal that they are the only one who can say it.

In one of his speeches, Haley talked about a turtle sitting on top of a flat fence post. He reminded all of us that when you see such a sight, you can be pretty much assured that the turtle had some help from somewhere. He compares himself to the turtle, and is careful to explain that he had much help in achieving his goals.

It may be that I will never hear from Alex Haley again and it is possible that I'll never write my novel. But no matter what tomorrow brings, I will always remember and treasure my conversation with Alex Haley.

Here is a man who has made an effort to tell the stories of America which speak to our very souls. Through his writing, I believe mankind has learned invaluable truths about our history.

County budget draws fire

By DANIEL CALABRESE
ANP Staff Writer

Blasting the Wayne County board of commissioners for what he called excessive revenue projections, County Executive Edward McNamara has vetoed a $1.3 billion budget for fiscal year 1989-90, including a general fund of $274 million.

The commissioners had adopted the budget Nov. 2, and had included several million dollars in revenue projections that McNamara had not foreseen in his proposed budget.

Commission Chairman Arthur Blackwell (D-Highland Park) said the budget will not include any revenue shortfall in the coming year, which covers the period of Dec. 1, 1989 through Nov. 30, 1990.

"This is a balanced budget, which protects the county's solvency," Blackwell said.

"We've been cautious in projecting next year's revenues, and careful to allocate limited funds to the highest priority services for Wayne County citizens."

Following the initial veto, the commission quickly passed a revised budget, which members said should address some of McNamara's concerns. But deputy county executive Michael Duggan said that budget will also likely be vetoed, because it does not do enough to address the $1.5 million deficit facing the county.

McNamara said the commission budget factors in money that "just isn't there," and forecasts serious shortfalls for the coming year if more realistic revenue projections are not made. He vowed to continue enacting vetoes until the commissioners approve a budget that he believes the county can live within.

The rejected budget included spending increases in several areas, based upon projected revenue increases from interest, reimbursements and drug forfeitures.

The county prosecutor's office was to use an additional $123,000 in drug forfeiture proceeds to support an increased legal staff.

In addition, commissioners projected increases of $160,000 in the form of state reimbursements from the handling of several victim's rights cases; and $5.4 million in interest from investments and bank deposits, an increase of $176,000 over 1988-89.

With the expected new revenues, the commissioners approved increases in several programs.

Class clowns take the stage

Every class has its clowns, but not every class takes its clowning seriously.

The Wayne County 4-H Clowning Around class offered twice each year, takes the matter very seriously. The fall session of the class concluded last week, sending nine new clowns out on their own.

Throughout the seven-week course, students learned the basics of clowning in order to prepare them for upcoming parades, birthday parties, company picnics or anyplace else a clown may be needed. Along with basic clown etiquette, students were taught how to make their own clown costumes, apply their makeup and perform basic magic and juggling acts.

"We try to touch a little bit on as many subjects as we can," said instructor Dan Jones, who works together with John Reed in teaching the course. Every lesson from Jones and Reed, also known as Tippy and Doo-Dah, helps to make the clown apprentices comfortable while performing.

"We try to teach that clowning is like a magic fantasy," Reed said. "It's like an all-day sucker or Never-Never Land."

Ypsilanti resident Dara Morgan said she took the class so she could entertain children at Muscular Dystrophy Camp in Brighton, where she teaches arts and crafts.

"Everything I do in life is serious, so it teaches me how to be not so serious and to be silly," Morgan said.

Wayne resident Billy Wilber, 12, the youngest student in the class, enrolled for a different reason.

"All of my friends used to call me a clown, and I always liked the clowns in the circus," said Wilber. "Now I can tell my them 'I take a class to be this stupid, what's your excuse?'"

At the graduation ceremony, each clown was required to perform a skit in front of an audience of friends and family members to show off what they had learned before receiving a certificate of recognition.

The next course is tentatively planned for February 1990. Anyone interested may contact John Reed at 729-6544 or Dan Jones at 722-8178.

Teaching a class of clowns can be trying at times. Instructor John Reed (above) has some difficulty getting a word in edgewise when Tippy decides to "clown around." Gale Wilbur (below) and her son, Billy study the fine art of making animals — a trick every clown needs to know.

Instructor Dan Jones, a.k.a. Tippy, (far left) blows up a balloon to be used in the balloon sculpture unit of the clown class. Every clown needs a gag, and Simon and Nora Vedder, a.k.a. Goldie and BoBo (above), selected a pretend car skit for the graduation day show. A clown's makeup is as important as his, or her, manner. Each clown has his, or her, own face. Dara Morgan (left) applies her clown face during class.

DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT

Local diner offers food '50s style

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Reminiscent of a 1950s style diner in decor and quality, Flag's restaurant shows its colors with its home-style, freshly-made selections.

Zois Rodis, owner of the Romulus business, has been in the restaurant business since 1956. The rules for success in this highly volatile business haven't changed since those early days, he said.

Customers still want quality at a reasonable price.

"I'm from the old school," he said. "When you cook something, cook it right."

Rodis also values the atmosphere of an eatery. He described Flag's as a simple family restaurant - clean with an effective staff.

"We have friendly faces here," he said.

Adding to the '50s effect is a counter embedded with menus at each place setting.

Rodis takes pride in the variety his menu offers. In addition to traditional breakfast dishes (served anytime), he offers a wide variety of sandwiches, soup, salads, entrees and desserts.

Dinner selections, ranging in price from $4.05 to 8.75, include beef kabobs, New York strip and Delmonico steak and chicken and veal.

The counter at Flag's restaurant is reminiscent of the 1950s. Zois Rodis (left) greets his customers with a smile and home-style meals. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer Popular 24 hours a day is the fresh-squeezed orange juice, he said.

Dessert selections include hot apple dumplings and two kinds of cheesecake along with the traditional pies, cakes and ice cream.

"If it's not on the menu, please ask for it," Rodis said.

In addition, Flag's offers free delivery for orders of $20 or more.

Orders must come from within a one-and-a-half-mile radius of the restaurant.

Open 24 hours a day, Flag's is located on Middlebelt Road near Wick Road.

Wonderland

Winter recreation sites prepared

By DANIEL CALABRESE
ANP Staff Writer

It may seem like Indian summer now, but do remember that the Detroit area was blanketed with snow only two weeks ago.

It was that snow – not the deceptive warming of this week – which is the omen of things to come in Michigan.

But, for those who are fighting reality and refusing to put away the golf clubs and the softball equipment, there is refuge in the knowledge that Michigan is known as the “winter wonderland.”

A multitude of opportunities are available for those who still wish to remain outdoors when the “going is brisk.”

At three local Metroparks in southwest Wayne County, patrons have plenty of offerings for the $2 daily admission fee.

Three skating ponds are available at Lower Huron Metropark, in Huron Township. At Willow Huron Park, to the south, trails have been established for cross-country skiing, along with equipment rental.

Although cross-country skiing is also permitted at Lower Huron, there are no established trails and no rental equipment.

Those people who rent their equipment at Willow are free to ski into Oakwoods Metropark, the adjoining park, located directly to the south of Willow.

A sled hill is also available for use at Willow.

Cross-country skiing is also available at the Westland Municipal Golf Course, on Merriman Road, near Cherry Hill, during the winter months.

For downhill enthusiasts, officials from some local communities sponsor trips to skiing sites. Canton Township parks and recreation officials sponsor a trip for teens to Alpine. Bob Dates, a township parks and recreation worker, described the annual trip as “very popular.”

But, for those who do not ski but would like to try, Canton officials sponsor skiing lessons at Riverview Highlands. And, for those who would like to stay on a more horizontal path, township officials offer cross-country skiing at Mayberry State Park, in Northville.

Those people who are interested in local winter recreation should contact the municipal parks and recreation departments in their communities to learn about the programs offered.

Linda Emmons, manager of MC Sporting Goods, in Westland, said skiing and hockey equipment remain the most popular items sold at the store.

Along with skates, sticks, poles and skis, Emmons said, many customers are interested in buying materials, such as wax, to care for their skis or in having that service performed at the store.

And, for those who simply cannot let go of summer, there are communities that will cater to you.

In Westland, golfers can obtain indoor lessons during the winter months at the municipal golf course. Local officials said the lessons are from Jan. 2 to April 1.

For the softball enthusiasts – those who are hopeful that the World Series will continue until Christmas – several communities offer groundhog softball tournaments, played outdoors in the snow.

There's nothing like softball to add the perfect touch to a blizzard.

Playoff bound

After earning half of the Suburban Athletic Conference basketball championship, the Vikings of Inkster will host the Class B district playoffs, which got underway in the high school gym Monday night. One key player in Coach Dwight Hotchkiss' strategy is high-scoring Leatrice Scott (at right) who has counted double figures since joining the team three weeks ago. The 1989 co-champs include: Tawana Green (photo below, kneeling, from left), Laquita Epps, Shonetta Lamar, Jean Braswell; second row are Camilah Johnson, Monique Roberts, Leatrice Scott, Latonya McMillan, Tequan Abney, and Alexis Watson.

Co-champs Inkster shares cage crown

By TOM MOORADIAN

The Vikings of Inkster and Coach Dwight Hotchkiss can thank River Rouge for its share of the 1989 Suburban Athletic Conference basketball title. Rouge upset undisputed SAC leader, Oak Park, last week, allowing the Vikings to back into the championship. Inkster and Oak Park finished the conference year with identical 9-2 records.

"We really didn't think Rouge could stop them," said Hotchkiss, whose club posted an enviable 16-3 won-lost record for the regular season. "It just goes to show that anything can happen, and believe me, we appreciate what they (Rouge) did."

But while the Panthers of Rouge were busy upsetting the Redskins, Inkster also had a tough assignment. They ran up against an improved Willow Run in their season's finale and managed to sweat out a 67-44 victory.

"It was a close game until the final four minutes," Hotchkiss noted, then we pulled away for good."

One of the reasons why the Vikings managed to break open the duel was the sudden scoring surge by Leatrice Scott, who pumped in eight of her game-high 19 points in the final minutes. Inkster jumped out in front of the Flyers, grabbing a 20-15 advantage after the first eight minutes. However, then the co-champs hit a cold spell and couldn't find the basket. Inkster managed to take a 33-25 lead into the locker room.

"We were not taking percentage shots, and I felt we were anxious to put them away," said Hotchkiss. "It became sloppy."

Inkster was awarded three, and could have had as many as four berths, on the 1989 Suburban Athletic Conference all-conference girls' basketball team.

The coaches from the conference last week selected Tequan Abney, a 5-7 junior, Shonnette Lamar, 5-3 junior guard, and Tawana Green, a 5-5 junior guard, from Coach Dwight Hotchkiss' Vikings, who shared the SAC title with Oak Park.

Oak Park and Inkster finished the league year with identical 9-2 won-lost records.

Hotchkiss believes that the Vikings deserved yet another player on the mythical lineup. He said that Tennessee transfer student, Leatrice Scott, deserved recognition. Since joining the team three weeks ago, Scott has contributed double figures both in scoring and in rebounds.

"However, most of the coaches said that they had not seen her play, therefore, could not vote for her," Hotchkiss said. "But I personally feel she (Scott) has the talent to play with the best of them in this state."

The Suburban Athletic Conference is a league made up from teams representing Inkster, Robichaud, Oak Park, Highland Park, Willow Run, Ecorse and River Rouge.

Playoffs Vikings oust Robichaud

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

While Inkster edged one more victory closer to their inevitable showdown with defending Class B district basketball champ, Divine Child, Romulus can pack up their uniforms and call it quits for the 1989 season.

Host Romulus was eliminated from the Class A district playoffs Monday night by title-favorite, Taylor Kennedy, 58-31.

Kennedy advanced into last night's semifinals to meet Southgate Anderson in the second of two games. Belleville was scheduled to make its playoff debut last night at Romulus, clashing with Taylor Truman.

The two winners will square off at 7 p.m. on Friday to decide the championship.

Unfortunately for the Romulus fans, the Eagles turned in their worst performance in their tournament opener. Trailing 14-9 at the end of the first period, first-night jitters apparently overwhelmed the hosts who came up on the short end of a 26-13 count at halftime. Kennedy went on to outscore their rivals 14-8 and 18-10 in the final two periods.

Not one Romulus player reached double figures. The closest was Sue Molenda, who walked off the floor with nine points. Kennedy's sharpshooting guard, Melissa McGue, finished with the evening's high of 16.

Inkster knocked out Robichaud with a balanced scoring attack and moved closer to the showdown.

Romulus also looked horrendous at the free throw line where they canned 13 of 30 chances.

In the meantime, Inkster continued to dominate their natural rivals, Robichaud, blasting the Bulldogs out of the playoffs, 81-25. The Vikings met Allen Park Cabrini last night and the winner has the honor of playing state-ranked Divine Child for the district championship at 7 p.m. Friday.

Inkster knocked out Robichaud with a balanced scoring assault led by Leatrice Scott, who had a game-high 17 points. Four other Vikings scored in double figures: Tawana Green counted 12, Tequan Abney 11, while Shonette Lamar and Latonya McMillan each had 10.

Here are district pairings

With the regular season behind them, local prep girls' basketball teams began their "second season" Monday.

The 1989 Michigan High School Athletic Association's women's basketball tournament got underway with district playoffs starting the action off. Romulus and Inkster high schools have been designated as sites for Class A and Class B tourneys, respectively.

At Inkster, state-ranked Dearborn Divine Child is favored to retain its Class B district title, while Taylor Kennedy has the inside track of winning the Class A title at Romulus.

Romulus edges Braves to finish 3rd in league

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Refusing to quit, although they had fallen behind by as much as 10 points at times, Romulus outscored Ypsilanti 7-6 in overtime to win a thrilling 58-57 girls' basketball game in overtime.

The victory boosted the Eagles' record to 3-5 in the league and gave them a tie for third place with Ypsi in the final standings.

"It's our best finish since we joined the league two years ago," said first-year Romulus Coach Tim Cullen, whose team finished the regular season with a 9-11 record.

"I am pleased with the overall effort of this team," Cullen continued. "We're a young team and have a lot to look forward to. However, I'm not satisfied with our record. Maybe a district championship would do that."

Romulus is host for the Class A district playoffs which began on Monday. The Eagles drew tournament favorite Taylor Kennedy in the first round.

Sue Molenda provided the heroics and the points for the Eagles to overcome Ypsi. She was a perfect four-for-four at the free throw line and contributed six of her team's seven points in the overtime. But that overtime was made possible by Rochelle Hawk, who exploded for 10 of her 16 points in the final eight minutes.

Romulus grabbed a slim 12-11 lead after the first period, then the Braves shut down their SCC rivals, allowing them only seven points while they pumped in 17. Ahead 28-19 after the initial half, the Braves couldn't stop the pressing Eagles, who cut into the lead with a 16-12 scoring advantage in the third period. Romulus made up the five-point difference in the fourth (16-11) as the two teams finished tied at 51-all when the final whistle sounded.

Delayed action

To tighten up the defense and add more scoring punch on offense, the Associated Newspapers' sports staff has gone back to the drawing boards to review their selections for the All-Area Football Team and Coach of the Year. The lineups, however, definitely will be ready next week, just in time to enjoy for the holidays. Don't miss the action on this pages next week. ANP photo by Werner Slocum/staff photographer

Hawk led the Eagles with 16 points, while Molenda had 15, and Carmita Brown added 12.

Ann Arbor Pioneer turned back the Eagles 68-52, despite Brown's superb fourth-period performance. Brown drilled in 12 of her game-high 22 points in the stretch to keep the outcome of the game in doubt.

After building up a 20-11 first period lead, the Ann Arbor caregivers looked as if they were going to blow their SCC rivals off the court. Romulus failed to bend. The Eagles came back from a 34-21 first-half deficit and exchanged baskets evenly (15-15) in the third quarter. The Braves held a 19-16 edge in the finale.

"It was an excellent game in the second half," Cullen said. "After falling behind like that, our girls refused to quit. It shows they have class."

Joining Brown in the double scoring column was Kelly Tessin, who finished with 17. She scored eight of those points in the third period.

Rice advances Rockets go out in a blaze of glory in finals

By TERRY JACOBY
ANP Staff Writer

Brother Rice proved to John Glenn that two can play the "big play" game.

Last week, the Rockets advanced to the Region III finals by using several big pass plays and some big defensive plays as they eliminated Fordson. But Saturday, the Warriors used their own versions of the long pass, and stopped the Rockets with several key defensive plays.

"The two pass plays are the ones that stand out, but there were other very important plays in the game," said John Glenn coach Chuck Gordon. "We didn't convert on a fourth down, and we couldn't sustain a drive after we picked up a first down on a fake punt."

Rice, the number-one ranked

"We thought we had a shot at them, and went into the game with a lot of confidence. And we played hard. I thought we could have pulled out the upset."

Glenn football coach team in the state, knocked the Rockets out of the playoffs before a packed house at John Glenn High School. In a game that saw six lead changes, the Warriors finally put away Glenn, 27-21.

Glenn quarterback Eric Stover connected with Mark Wetmore on the second play of the game, as the Rockets were on the move early in the first quarter. But on a third-and-three play, Stover's pass was incomplete and the Rockets were forced to punt from mid-field.

The Glenn defense, thanks to a motion penalty, stopped the Warriors on three plays and the Rockets retrieved the ball right away.

The Rockets picked up a first down, but disaster struck on the next play. Stover dropped back to pass, but fumbled the ball at the 21-yard line and Jason Randall, of Brother Rice, picked up the ball and raced into the Glenn end zone.

Stover was under heavy pressure, and as he tried to get away from the rush, he was hit and dropped the ball. The Warriors converted the extra point, and led 7-0 with 4:36 left.

"That wasn't how we wanted to start off the game," Gordon said. "We just had a breakdown on our pass protection."

But the Rockets came right back.

Shannon Layne ran the ball for a first down to the Glenn 30-yard line. Stover then hooked up with David Ryan on a big pass play as the Rockets moved into Brother Rice territory.

Ryan, who is the Rockets' leading receiver, ran a crossing pattern and Stover delivered the ball right on the money.

Inkster sets cage organizational talks

Inkster recreation officials are seeking players for their women's winter basketball league.

Team representatives are urged to attend a 6 p.m. meeting today in the Recreation Complex, located at 2025 Middlebelt Road. League competition will get underway the first week of December, according to recreation officials.

Recreation officials also are planning to organize an adult men's basketball league.

"We are looking for teams from churches, industry, business or made up of friends," officials noted.

An organizational meeting, the second of its kind, is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Dec. 11 at the recreation complex. The league will be in operation on Jan. 8, and games will be played Monday and Wednesday evenings.

A three-on-three basketball league was expected to begin action last night.

Recreation officials said that they are planning to put together junior basketball leagues with a boys and girls' division. There will be two separate divisions: Class "E", for 15- and 16-year olds; Class F, for 13- and 14-year olds. A meeting is slated for 7 p.m. Nov. 17 at the complex to discuss the league.

In the meantime, the girls' league, for players 17 and under, was scheduled to begin this week (Nov. 9).

For further information about the basketball leagues or any other recreation program, telephone 728-7530.

Winter schedules please

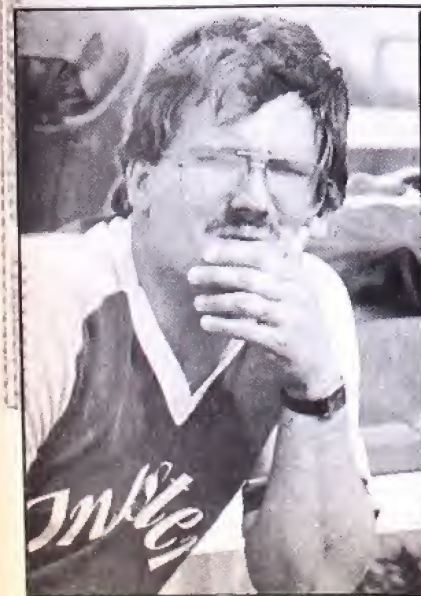

With the fall high school sports season quickly fading, and the 1989-90 prep winter sports season closing in fast, the Associated Newspapers' sports staff is again urging all local high school athletic directors to send out their schedules.

The schedules will help writers and photographers set up their assignments for the season.

If there is a new coach, athletic directors are encouraged to include the coach's home telephone number with the schedule so that the ANP sports staff may contact him or her for information.

Mail the schedules to: Associated Newspapers, C/O Sports Desk, 35540 Michigan Avenue, Wayne, MI. 48184.

Those who need further information may contact staff writers Tom Mooradian or Terry Jacoby at 729-4000.

Tigers on the run

With a pair of state qualifiers in their midst and a lineup loaded with talented underclassmen, Belleville High has built a reputation as the cross country "team to beat" in the area and Wolverine "A" Conference. Coach Sam Vicchy's club boasted an all-state performer in Ann Gray, who finished third at state, and they also had a state qualifier in Carmelita Martell, a 19th place finisher at the regionals. Team members include: Janet Hoffman (kneeling, from left), Taira Jared, Carmelita Martell, Amy Fisher, Becky Brown and Anne Gray; second row are Dorvia Thomas, Jenny Woodington, Jennifer Vandecar, Jerry Sweeney, Faith Bodenmiller, Tracy Stewart, Jessica Boelter, Jill Kolver, and Carla Blackwell. score their hosts 12-10 in the third period, but the Vikings resoundingly put an end to any upset plans with a 24-7 scoring edge in the final period.

Scott's 19 led all scorers while Latonya McMillan was close by with 17.

If the Vikings are to survive the district playoffs they will have to find a way to better their efforts at the free-throw line. They capitalized on only 14 of 30 offerings; Willow Run didn't fare any better. The Flyers were nine of 22.

"I am really happy for my players," Hotchkiss commended. "They have worked hard and winning this title means a lot to us."

Earlier in the week, the Vikings put away the Braves of Ypsilanti 74-58 as Scott led the assault with a career-high 27 points, 12 rebounds and eight steals.

But it was Tequan Abney who got the Vikings off to a fast start. She tossed in six of her 21 points in the first period to stake the Vikings to a 22-10 lead that they never surrendered. Although the Braves came back and outscored their nonconference rival 14-11 and 20-16 in the middle periods, they never mustered enough scoring power to make up the deficit. The Vikings put their rivals away, 25-14, in the last period.

McMillan also reached double figures with 10.

For the first time in the history of the school, Inkster is host to a girls' district tournament. Among teams competing for the championship are Dearborn Divine Child, Annapolis, Robichaud, Willow Run, Allen Park Cabrini and Inkster.
